A Few Words to Shoe Buyers

When we added Men's and Boys' Shoes to our business some years since we pursued the same policy that we have carried out for years, viz.: To buy only the products of the best manufacturers in the land. Here you find Hanan, Walkover, Nettleton, Douglas and Barker Brown Shoes, the first four named the very acme of gentlemen's footwear, the last named, Barker Brown, the best work shoe made in the world. Particular care is exercised in our selection of Boys' Shoes. There are two unique features in our shoe business: One, that no shoe house in the State has as many of the best line strictly confined to them, by reason that we sell more than enough of each line to justify this. The other is that we warrant every pair, including shiny leathers, to give reasonable satisfaction. We want to add YOU to our shoe patrons.

WASHINGTON'S LOSS

Destruction of Celebrated Court house By Fire Irreparable and Deeply Deplored

May Be Rebuilt and Replica of Old Building Restored—Its Early History

All Washington and Mason county is mourning and regretting the loss of the historic old Courthouse, which for over half a century was the capital of Mason county and the center of a once brilliant and unrivaled assemblage of wit, eloquence and statesmanship.

No building in the entire United States, outside of the leading Federal structures, has sheltered and entertained as many world-famous personages as the Washington Courthouse. The names of the distinguished men and women who were housed under its moss-grown roof would fill a column and run into the hundreds and thousands.

In the spring of 1775 Simon Kenton came down the Ohio river and landed at the mouth of a creek called afterwards Limestone, which runs through the present city of Maysville. The morning after he landed he shouldered his rifle and went South through the woods in search of game. After traveling some three miles, to his great joy he found an abundance of game and cane growing upon the richest ground he had ever seen. Finding a spring of good water, he and his companion, a young man named Williams, made themselves a comfortable camp, and, with their tomahawks, cleared a small piece of ground. Their clearing was finished in May, and the remains of some corn which they had got from a French trader for the purpose of parching they obtained seed and planted, perhaps, the first corn ever grown in that country on the North side of the Kentucky river. Here, tending their corn with their tomahawks, they remained the undisputed masters of the richest domain on earth until fall, when their corn ripened and they prepared a permanent camp, which they named "Kenton's Station," which was about a mile from the present town of Washington, on the North. The historic farm is now owned by Colonel John Chambers. In 1784, after several years' absence, Kenton returned, and from 1784 may be dated the beginning of the real history of Washington, which was named in honor of President Washington.

The town of Washington was established in 1786 by the Virginia Legislature, but was named and laid out in 1785 by Arthur Fox and William Wood, a Baptist Preacher. The writer has a memorandum of the sale of the town site of Washington from Simon Kenton to Arthur Fox and others. It is also a fact that Arthur Fox was a first Trustee of Maysville and owned the site where Dover stands.

The Courthouse at Washington was erected in 1794 by Louis Craig, the pioneer Baptist Preacher and stonemason. The original building was of the simplest style of architecture, which prevailed in those good old Colonial days, with small doors and windows, two stories high, with cupola for bell and snrnburred by a 20-foot tower or spire with the usual weather vane—an arrow showing the bent of the wind. There were four rooms in the building, which stood back on the main street of Washington about a hundred and fifty feet.

In 1790 Washington had 119 houses. In the years 1797 and 8 "The Kentucky Palladium," one of the first papers in the State, was published at Washington by Hunter & Beaumont. For fifty years the town flourished and was the principal point of trade for miles around, and at one time it contained about twenty flourishing commercial houses, but with the removal of the county seat to Maysville Washington began to decline as a business center. Washington is just two years older than Maysville.

Kenton's Station was the principal camp and rendezvous of Simon Kenton, Daniel Boone and other pioneer hunters and settlers, and many contests with the Indians are recorded and unrecorded.

The county of Mason was established in 1789 and the Courthouse was built in 1794. It was constructed by Louis Craig, as we are informed by an inscription in the arch over the door. This was chiseled in a heavy stone, the face of which had been smoothed for the lettering.

This is the same man of whom mention was recently made concerning the building of a monument to mark his burial place by the Baptists, of which denomination he was a Preacher.

Thomas Marshall, a brother of the Chief Justice, was the first Clerk of Court, and within the memory of the writer Colonel Marshall Key was another Clerk.

After the removal of the county seat to Maysville the building was given by the county to the town of Washington for school purposes, to which purpose it had since been employed.

There used to be a very large brick building just in the rear of the present one where Court was held in more modern days, but which was torn down many years ago.

The old building was adorned with a beautiful portico or porch, covering the entire front of the structure, upheld by eight massive square columns. This, too, had long since been torn away.

The writer well remembers all these matters, and when Court was held there John A. McClung, Rochester Beatty, Frank T. Chambers, Harrison Taylor, Thomas Nelson, John Drake Taylor and many others, equally profound and bright, with others nearly as well known, conducted the Court's business as attorneys.

Many interesting associations are part of the history of this old landmark.

It was a sad sight to see the pile wrapped in flames, and desperate were the attempts to reach the cupola, in the very top' of which it originated, first in a little curl of smoke in the early gray of the morning, but the birds having filled this with nests, this material acted as tinder and the heavy timbers readily succumbed.

The bolt that was the means of committing the historic pile to ashes was accounted by all who heard it the most terrific they ever experienced.

Thus has passed away a most interesting and unique relic and one which many thousands have come hundreds of miles to see.

Postmaster H. B. Branson of Carlisle was in Maysville yesterday morning the Parks Hill Chautauqua, of which he is the main speaker.

The Board of Trade, through Mr. H. C. Curran, Secretary, has received a number of copies of the Kentucky Statute's governing motor vehicles, compiled by Secretary of State Ben L. Branner, which can be had by parties interested on application at this office.

Many interesting associations are part of the history of this old landmark.

It was a sad sight to see the pile wrapped in flames, and desperate were the attempts to reach the cupola, in

Was Perfectly Bald When He Started to Use Newbro's Herpilide.

Frederick Manuell, Maryland black, Butte, Montana, bought a bottle of Newbro's II-herpilide, April 6, '99, and began to use it for entire baldness. The hair follicles in his scalp were not dead and in 20 days he had hair all over his head. On July 2 he writes, "and today my hair is as thick and luxuriant as any one could wish." Newbro's Herpilide works on an old principle and with a new discovery—destroy the cause and you remove the effect. Herpilide destroys the germ that causes dandruff, falling hair, and finally baldness, so that with the cause gone the effect cannot remain. Stop falling hair and new growth starts. "This, My Dear, is a Tungsten Lamp"

It looks like an ordinary electric incandescent, but it is nearly three times as brilliant. The wire filament inside the bulb is made of tungsten metal, capable of radiating much more light and much less heat than the ordinary carbon filament.

Housewives should try the G.E. Tungsten 40-watt lamp instead of the 50-watt carbon lamp now in general use. Costs one-fifth less for electricity and gives just twice as much light.
